THE LORD'S PRAYER: (said responsively)

OUR FATHER . . .

Our power, uniting us to the one next store, the Negro, the African, the communist, the poor, the rich, the dirty. . .

WHO ART IN HEAVEN . . .

but who can be seen here in the clouds, the flowers, the oceans, and even in the teenage dances, the wild parties, the mess of the world, and in the midst of hate . . .

HALLOWED BE THY NAME . . .

even when it is used with damn . . . even when mocked at, even when used to our own advantage. . .

THY KINGDOM COME . . .

into our hearts, our loves, our lives, our troubles, misgivings, doubts . .

THY WILL BE DONE ON EARTH AS IT IS IN HEAVEN . . .

. . . but can earth be heaven? . . . dare we ask why such a mess? why war? why hate? why poverty? why doubts? . . . why?

GIVE US THIS DAY OUR DAILY BREAD. . .

physically, to get through the day, to swim, to run, to win . . .
spiritually to meet each day creatively with its work, troubles, goods, and bads . . .

AND FORGIVE US OUR TRESPASSES . . .

. . . Life, love, hopes, friends, food, talents, joys and sorrows, someone to love, . . . Oh! we owe so much!

AS WE FORGIVE THOSE WHO TRESPASS AGAINST US . . .

. . . the brother who hates, the one who hurts us, the selfish one in life, the unfair one, but then, do we really forgive them? . . . do we really love them? . . . how? Help us to, even though we don't want to.

AND LEAD US NOT INTO TEMPTATION . . .

. . . in other words, become a strong enough part of our lives, our faiths, so that we can resist the urge to satisfy our own desires; not to think of others, to hate, to strike back, to disobey, to fall . . .

BUT DELIVER US FROM EVIL . . .

help us to create a new world . . . instead of this hatred, this mess, where to kill is a way of life, to cheat is right, where war is peace and death is the climax! the end . . .

FOR THINE IS THE KINGDOM . . .

on this earth now, all around us crying, yearning to be born anew.

AND THE POWER . . .

seen in the civil rights worker, the peace corps, the man living for others, the snowstorms and sunsets, and in faith. . .

AND THE GLORY . . .

in everything that is good and beautiful, in dedicating ourselves, our education, our spiritual values to the task of bringing a new world order into being . . . with LOVE and its cornerstone.

FOREVER AND EVER . . .

Someday. Someday. — heaven will be ours . . . Amen.

*HYMN — "God of grace and God of glory."

God of grace and God of glory, On thy people pour thy power;

Crown thine ancient church's story; Bring her bud to glorious flower.

Grant us wisdom, grant us courage, For the facing of this hour.

Lo! the hosts of evil round us Scorn thy Christ, assail his ways!

From the fears that long have bound us Free our hearts to faith and praise:

Grant us wisdom, grant us courage, For the living of these days.

Cure thy children's warring madness, Bend our pride to thy control;

Shame our wanton, selfish gladness, Rich in things and poor in soul.

Grant us wisdom, grant us courage, Lest we miss thy kingdom's goal.

Set our feet in lofty places; Gird our lives that they may be Armoured with all Christ-like graces In the fight to set men free.

Grant us wisdom, grant us courage, that we fail not man nor thee.

Amen.

Memorial High School
Middleboro, Massachusetts

Foreword

The four years of our high school education pass swiftly—going almost as quickly as they come. Years from today, we will look back on these times—full of memories. Both the pride of winning and the woe of defeat, the accomplishments and the failures will be recalled. This is what the 1968 Timaron hopes to accomplish—to serve as a reminder of these wonderful times. May we grow old mindful of what M. H. S. has meant and may the turning of these pages be the source of an untold wealth of pleasure in remembering a time that once was.

. . . Mr. Boyle!

Dedication

Mr. Boyle:

In your role as a teacher, you have brought understanding to your students. But more than this, your ready wit and sense of humor have made you well liked throughout the school—by both students and teachers. You have also willingly given of your your time as a coach.

With sincere admiration and appreciation, we, the Class of 1968, dedicate our yearbook to you, who have served us so well in all these capacities.

The Superintendent's Message:

Yesterday is but a dream and tomorrow is only a vision; but today, well-lived, makes of every yesterday a dream of happiness and every tomorrow a vision of hope. Look well therefore, unto this Day, for in it lie the verities and realities of your existence.

Despair not for you have Evinced, proud and justly so. With Paeon and sonnet
Enter into the realm of the Necessary. Not by the Dubitable but under the discerning Aegis of learning shall the Breadth of living be maintained. Your Intrinsic worth, enhanced, Yes
Leavened by thought and process,
Imbues in those about you
The dependence and faith in

The Vice-Principal's Message:

To The Class of 1968:

Congratulations upon your graduation from high school. This may seem to you to be a final curtain in the drama of life. But, educationally speaking, graduation means a commencement—a beginning. It marks a point at which your life becomes a more intimate possession. All the planning and guidance until now guarantees no success, unless you have established goals for your life and standards to live by. Be certain that your goals are attainable and that your standards are high in the eyes of mankind. Then constantly strive, with wisdom, courage, and perseverance, to make your life a success.

Sincerely,
Joseph L. King

Class History

In the beginning there was Chaos. Then, in September 1964, Mount Memorial was invaded by an astonishingly new class of gods—the class of '68. With it came the stamina necessary to eliminate the confusion of older generations of deities.

Muddled as our elders were, we shuddered at their warnings of trips across the Ramp Styx into the office of Hades, from which it was said we would never return. We vowed never to put these rumors to the test of truth. Our immortal freshman leaders were: Zeus—alias Arthur Judge, Hera—Nancy Briggs, and their assistants, the Gods of Letters and Numbers, Bernie Sprayberry and Sue Wood, respectively.

In the spring, Carol Deane and Arthur Judge were honored by their fellow gods with their election to the Silver "M" Society. One of our Disciples of Pan, Mike Browne, was requested to share his divine talents with a group of mortal musicians called SEMSBA. Six freshman girls were selected as apprentices to the Nine Muses, Bernie Sprayberry, Sue Wood, Carol Smith, Sherry Pattee, Brenda Korpinen, and Evie Frankl, and it was rumored that Poseidon himself could hear their enthusiastic cries in his chambers beneath the sea.

With the beginning of our sophomore year, we really began to gain control of Mount Memorial. Led by our chief gods, Zeus—Robert Kerrigan, Hera—Bernie Sprayberry, and the Gods of Letters and Numbers, Nancy Briggs and Sue Wood, we followed Ares' warriors of the basketball court to Boston Garden for the Tech Tourney. Helping cheer on the athletes were four of our own members of the Nine Muses. As usual, our class was well represented at Pan's Mortal Music Festivals; Mike Browne went to District and All State, Beverly Alberti went to District, and SEMSBA included deities Beverly Alberti, Mike Falcetano, Mike Browne, Carol Marra, Jean Sanborn, and Brenda Sylvia. Two more of our exceptional gods were honored with membership in the Silver "M" Society, and we went on to become unpperclassmen. The year was over at last, and although even Prometheus would have squirmed at the sight of our biology laboratory, we had managed to keep our class intact for future successes.

The junior year on Mount Memorial was found to be one of trials and tribulations, even by gods as worthy as we. For the first time, our immortality was challenged by a group of mortals known as the College Entrance Examination Board, but in spite of our insecurity, we survived them, proving our endurance. Zeus resumed the name of Arthur Judge, Hera became Nancy Briggs, and the Gods of Letters and Numbers took on the identities of Carol Marra and Mike Browne. The Silver "M" Society chose two new members, Carol Marra and Carol Smith. That year we had eight representatives to SEMSBA, four to District, and one who went on to All State. The Junior Olympian Ball was a grand affair. Nectar and ambrosia were graciously served to us by a group of mortals, while outside the evil powers of the underworld played havoc with the weather. For their tireless efforts, we bestowed upon our class advisors Mrs. Buck and Mr. Majuri the titles of Honorary Olympians. In the spring, nineteen scholastically inclined gods and goddesses were inducted into the National Honor Society, including Beverly Alberti, Nancy Briggs, Elizabeth Brown, Michael Browne, Maryanna Buck, Mary Dascoul'as, Kathleen Donnelly, Michael Falcetano, Evelyn Frankl, Shirley Gerrior, John Hocking, Kathryn Horbal, Alan Iampietro, Carol Marra, Richard Neville, Jean Sanborn, Carol Smith, Francine Stirblis, and Brenda Sylvia. Because of their outstanding Olympian citizenship, Carol Smith was asked to attend Girls' State and Alan Iampietro and Robert Whitaker were delegates to Boys' State.

Finally, in September 1967, we ruled Mount Memorial from its summit, the senior year. After four years of struggle, there were no more older mortals to tell us what to do. Leading our expedition to the top were Zeus—Mike Browne, Hera—Nancy Briggs, and the Gods of Letters and Numbers, Carol Marra and Jim Bernabeo. We also controlled the Gods' Council, having as members of our class President Robert Kerrigan, Vice-President John Bradley, Secretary Carol Smith, and Treasurer Dorothy Lacerda. Evelyn Frankl now led the Nine Muses, assisted by her qualified co-captains Sherry Pattee and Sue Wood. Our exceptional football team, led by Bob MacAuley and Jim Bernabeo, defeated the neighboring Trojans for the first time in six years, once more proving the superiority of the Mount Memorial gods. Robert MacAuley received Ares' Award for Most Valuable Player, and Rick Bourne was named recipient of the Judge L. Francis Callan Award. Queen of Mount Memorial Jane Freeman was crowned at the Coronation Dance; she was attended by ten goddesses.

Our basketball team was off to a fine start under captain Bob MacAuley. In December, Rod MacLeod and Nat Donner were elected to the Silver "M" Society and Rod, Tom Maddigan, William Small, and Linda Reimels entered the National Honor Society. In December, the immortal president of our class, Mike Browne, added another honor to the list, that of Student Government Day representative; earlier, Evie Frankl had received the DAR Award. Pan's Festivals were represented at District by Robert Allison, Nat Donner, and Beverly Alberti, while SEMSBA participants included Sandra Kaasinen, Carol Marra, Kathryn Horbal, Jean Sanborn, Richard Neville, Michael Browne, Brenda Sylvia, Gerald Shaw, Natalie Donner, and Robert Allison.

After the successful senior play and elaborate senior reception, we graduated as full-fledged gods from Mount Memorial, leaving our immortal example to be followed by future generations of mortals.

The Prophecy

In the year 2068, a select group of individuals from the tiny land of Memoria, having become fed up with the space race between Washington and Moscow, decided to put an end to it by winning it themselves. President Mike Browne organized a committee to decide how this could best be done; this group, headed by Vice President Nancy Briggs, included Secretary of the Secretary Carol Marra and Secretary of the Treasury Jim Bernabeo. After weeks of careful investigation, the plan was made public by government spokesman Robert Allison.

Four fully equipped spaceships would be launched in four different directions and, according to mathematicians Gerard Millette and John Hocking, the probability was that at least one would land—somewhere. The first rocket was appropriately christened SACHEM I by Queen Jane at an elaborate ceremony. Her Majesty's beautiful gown was a special creation styled by Beverli of London. The event was attended by representatives from all walks of life, including the lovely star of stage and screen, Brenda Korpinen, accompanied by her shady producer, Rich Fontaine, Memoria's own Leonardo da Vinci, Arthur Judge, the famed archeologists Maryanna Buck and Beth Sukeforth, who had just returned from a dig on Lake Assawompsett, Chartreuse Chateau dietician Shirley Gerrior, and world famous woman basketball "star" Melanie Krikorian. Present also was the trustworthy crew of SACHEM I, MacAulay, Bourne, Beckman, Kramer, Maddigan, Gomes, and Abren, each of whom brought his own bottle of champagne, hoping fervently that Queen Jane would choose his. This champagne had been graciously donated by Kerrigan and Bradley Bottlers, Inc. Covering the christening for the Memoria Meteor was reporter Kathy Horbal. As the ceremony ended, Ambassador to Russia Evelyn Frankl was hustled back to her private plane by Secret Service agents John Bennett, Daniel Cassidy, and Robert Gardiner.

With the blast-off time approaching, last minute checks were made on all four ships by Memoria's top notch staff of technicians, including Barry Card, Bob Carter, and Mike Mason. That much appreciated domestic touch was added to the spaceships with rations by homemakers Judy Gates, Sharon Squires, and Joanne Cordeiro. Finally, bespectacled Richard von Neville, Memoria's mad scientist, began the count-up: "Eins, zwei, drei"—WAIT! There seemed to be some commotion aboard SACHEM III. Marilyn Shaw and Gene Powell had each tried to smuggle one of their pet chickens onto the ship. But Bob Whitaker quickly put an end to that by reminding them that if they were allowed to bring two chickens aboard, at least two of every other animal would have to come, and that was out of the question. The count-up continued: "fear, feumpf"—BOOM!

Three of the four ships began travelling in their predetermined direction—UP—but the last, SACHEM II, was unmistakably headed west. A quick look at the tracking screen confirmed all suspicions. At the instrument panel were Art Balzotti, Gary Michael, and Alan Iampietro. All of a sudden, like a flashing comet, something shot past the window of SACHEM II. "It's a shooting star." "It's a meteor." "No, it's Steve Bigelow on his motorcycle—he's trying to beat us all and stake his claim first." While the attention of the pilots was directed toward Bigelow, an attempt was made by the last of the Muttokk Marauders, Barry Donner, to seize control of the craft. The frenzied cries of Sherry Pattee and Sue Wood, however, alerted plainclothesmen John Sederquist, Barry Rullo, Arthur Wood, and Jimmy Wambolt, who rushed in, in the nick of time, to arrest Donner. Later reports indicated that Ernie the Judge had declared him not guilty by reason of insufficient evidence.

Back at control headquarters, a team of Memoria secretaries worked feverishly to record the universe-shaking events for posterity. They were Elizabeth Brown, Janine Abair, Kathy Donnelly, Kathy Chandler, Sandra Lynch, Francine Sturbli, Barbara Hall, Sharon Lee, Marlene Motta, and Sue O'Brien. Headquarters were becoming crowded, as interested citizens from all corners of Memoria filed in to witness this extraordinary episode in the annals of human history. Present were comedienne Judy Ferraguto, racing car drivers Robert Westgate, Chuck Thomas, and John Mosley, millionaire Donald Jefferson, owner of Memoria's only discotheque, millionairesses Gail Maddigan, controlling stockholder of AT&T, and Eileen Kelley, famous restaurant chain owner. Memoria's school system was represented by teachers Mary Dascoulias, Linda Reimels, Margaret MacKenzie, Sandra Kaasinen, Dorothy Lacerda, Carol Smith, Brenda Sylvia, and Jean Sanborn, each of whom had brought a class of their little "angels" to see history in the making. But the room was becoming crowded; von Neville could not concentrate! Finally his assistant scientist, William Small, whom he jokingly called Big Bill, ordered the crowd to disperse. His shouts could not be heard above the chatter of the children, and so, as a last resort, Memoria's trustworthy police force was called in. Fully armed with water pistols and slingshots came David Allen, Wayne Lee, Kevin Grant, and Tom Levesque to the rescue.

Back in space, it seemed that Sachem III had suddenly drifted off its own course and was speeding after Sachem IV. This was not according to the plan. A quick check of the TV screen shockingly revealed Carol Deane, Sue daCosta, Cheryl Gauthier, and Diane Kettle in control of Sachem IV. Their ardent pursuers were none other than the notorious Larry Johnson, with his cronies Bob Gillis, Dave Cowan, and Dana Preti. Von Neville wrung his hands in despair. "Vot has become of zee master plan?!!" But like the sun breaking through a storm cloud, just at that moment of darkest despair, messenger Everett Lundquist came running in with the bright news. "Sachem I has landed!" Shrieks of joy issued from Rose Guimares and Pat Hannon, while Metropolitan Opera stars Louise Mello, Natalie Donner and Michael Falcetano sang the first measures of the Hallelujah Chorus. Reverend Rod MacLeod offered a prayer of thanks.

The landing party was in equally high spirits. The victors were immediately welcomed with musical selections by the sextet of John Crutchfield, Jim Grose, Mike O'Toole, Bill Lacombe, Gerry Shaw, and Richard Leonard. Meanwhile, biologist Nancy Lee went off to investigate the planet for possible plant life. Artist Peggy Call set up her easel, determined to capture the joyful scene on canvas. Fortune hunters, Bill Gaudette, Jim Dunn, Dave Hosley, and Robert Hudon saw an unusually shiny stone right next to the spaceship and grabbed for it, but much to their mixed-emotions, found Janet Burke at the other end.

Suddenly, Benjamin Osgood came running in with the news that the planet was inhabited. Hearing this, Kenneth Nichols, Bill Hanson, Karson Paquin, Carlton Shaw, Henry Zion, and Gerry Wager reached for their cap guns and started to race off, but nurses Kathy Heimerdinger and Judy Benson convinced them to calm down and greet the natives with a friendly, rather than hostile welcome.

This bit of psychological advice would have been fine—back on earth; but the tiny crossed-eyed creatures who lived on the planet had never heard of Freud, and when they were invaded, they attacked. The battle was a fierce one. Brave Bill Minkle led his improvised troops, consisting of Bill Clark, Chuck Leonard, Kenneth Jessee, Gerald Miller, Vincent Campano, and Richard Kessler into the heart of the enemy fire, while Heather Paquin and Juanita Sykes stayed behind to hand out new caps to anyone who needed them.

Just then, when all seemed lost, Sachem III and IV crash landed, right in the middle of the opposing army, scattering the cowardly foe in all directions. Sachem I was safe. But where was Sachem II?

About three milky months later, defense chief Dave Thimas was told by his trusty look-outs, Larry Gates, Howard Sewall, and Bob Shaw, that they had spotted a strange object from the west on their radar screen. Chief military men Charles Struck and Neil Leonard wanted to ignore the strange craft, but social worker, Louise Williams, finally persuaded them that the space travellers were probably harmless . . . Not only were they harmless, they were lost!

As the "strange object" came into view, a shout of surprise rose from the planet. Sachem II had been unable to find a place to live, and was drifting in space, so navigators Larry Cole, Peter Remillard, and Larry Barrows guided them to safety.

The four ships were re-united at last, and the first civilization in outer space began, started, of course, by the class of '68.

Timaron Staff

The Timaron Staff is not all it appears to be ... it is much, much more. The expected fame and glory are lost somewhere amid stacks of copy sheets and rough drafts. In the process of recording a memento of the students who will receive them upon graduation, pictures must be taken, schedules must be followed, write-ups must be written, copy must be typed, panic must be subdued, and deadlines must be met. To record, through paper and photo, the existence and being of the Class of 1968 involves not the mere process of putting pen to paper to complete a mechanical function, but rather to create the true personality of all that finds its place on the pages of the Timaron.

Many hours (and hours and hours and hours) are spent pondering over the right picture, the right place, and the right word, which editor-in-chief, Maryanna Buck, must oversee with the diligence of a hawk.

Finding themselves drained of all possible literary creativity, assistant editors, Kathryn Horbal and Evie Frankl, can testify to the exhausting task of thinking.

How many torn copy pages and ruined pieces of art can copy editor, Carol Smith, and art editor, Beverli Alberti, attest to? Richard Fontaine and Barry Card, the unsung heroes of our crowd, stood for months in the rain, sleet, and mud, supervising the photography of the athletics. (We almost lost Richard running after the cross-country team for a good shot).

The art of photography has met its match with photography editors, Carol Marra and Brenda Sylvia, who can assure you that there is nothing worse than a tight schedule—one hour behind time.

When press time is near, who does everyone seek but the typists, Sherry Pattee and Beth Sukeforth, who would do alright by themselves if it weren't for all the stupid help offered by the staff. To write the book is one thing, but to finance it is quite another. Business manager, Nancy Briggs, and her business staff are at the heart of the production of the 1968 Timaron. Vacillating between panic and despair, with coffee cup to steady the nerves and pen to steady the mind, wishing that Apr. 1 was here, is our dauntless, super-heroine, Mrs. Barbara Bennett.

As we close the last pages of the 1968 Timaron, we the staff, feel proud and honored to have been chosen to figure eminently in the production of something that shall never die. We thank you for the privilege.

Both the National Honor Society and the Humanities-Science Class are for the recognition of those students who stand high academically. The Anchrier Chapter of the National Honor Society represents scholarship, character, leadership, and service. The society meets monthly under the guidance of Mrs. Lois Buck and Mr. Kenneth Warchol to plan and discuss the activities of the various committees. Service to the community includes putting up the flags on holidays and ushering at school functions. The scholarship committee sponsored a mid-winter college forum, inviting former MHS students to discuss college life with college-bound juniors and seniors.

The Humanities-Science Class provides a preview of college-type lectures for those students at MHS in high academic standing. Meeting three times monthly, the class hears guest professors speak on topics ranging from radio and television advertising to archaeology and geology. The interesting and varied programs are organized by the group's advisors, Mrs. Marion Whipple and Miss Phyllis Dupee.

Both the Literary Club and the Charles Theater Group serve to satisfy the intellectual curiosity of their members.

Lively discussions and perseverance—that's what's happening in the newest club, led by Mr. Joseph P. Joaquin, an English instructor. The small group meets weekly to discuss novels and learn the basic techniques of composition. Although the class is small, it should prove to be of benefit to those of our students entering college in the fall.

The Charles Theater Group, made up of about a dozen MHS'ers from sophomore level up, travels into Boston five times yearly to attend the performances of the Charles Playhouse Inc. The plays are varied in scope, ranging from Shakespearean tragedy to modern satire and providing cultural enlightenment. Serving in supervisory capacity are Mrs. Gail Twomey and Mr. Joseph Zilonis.

The Student Council is composed of two students from each homeroom, who have been chosen by the students of that room to represent them. The council sponsors school dances throughout the year as well as many other fund-raising activities. The Student Council also provides for a Scholarship at the end of the year for any worthy senior. Due to double sessions this year the Freshman representatives form a separate council acting under the supervision of the main body. It gives the students a chance for self-government and for expression of ideas. Mr. Harvey Brooks serves as the group's advisor.

Activities include lectures by speakers noted in their fields, interesting and educational films on a variety of subjects, and field trips to local points of interest to biology enthusiasts.

Another group of students interested in biology are the lab assistants. This dedicated group of helpers aid the Biology Department by giving up their free periods to aid in such varied activities as consulting students having difficulty in their lab procedures, correcting papers and generally relieving the teacher from unnecessary time-consuming tasks.

Musically inclined students at MHS annually take part in the Southeastern Massachusetts School Bandmasters Association, along with students from surrounding communities. Auditions for District are conducted in October, and the concert is held in January; S.E.M.S.B.A. dates for these activities are January and March respectively. The concerts are held in various schools in the area and are open to the public. These activities give the students occasion to work under different conductors and widen their musical appreciation. Records are made of the concerts, and members have a chance to purchase them. Only the most talented musicians are selected because of the short rehearsal time available. Students who have never performed together are given a maximum of 12 hours to prepare for their concert.
